To the Members of the W.C.T.U.

Dear Co-Workers:— The regular monthly meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held in the Ev. Church on Monday, August 11th, at 3 p.m.

As we are again nearing the end of our convention year, a call to "Arms" is the "Battle Cry" from Provincial head quarters.

Letters from our leading officers inform us that our first Provincial Convention for Alberta will be held at Olds from September 26th-29th, which for certain reasons is earlier than convention dates of former years.

This change necessitates the holding of our annual business meeting in August, instead of September, so that our reports may reach our Provincial Officers and they in their turn may have time to prepare their work for convention.

We, as your retiring officers take this opportunity to urge upon you your individual responsibility in being present at this meeting to voice your personal sentiments in the transaction of all business, and especially the appointment of new officers.

A resume of the business is as follows:

- I Reports of Officers and Superintendents.
- II Election of Officers for coming year.
- III Appointing of Delegates for Convention.
- IV Deciding how much money we can afford to pledge for Provincial Organization work.

Let us bear in mind that the success of our work for the coming year will largely depend upon the success of next Monday's meeting, and that we are a part of the organization.

At this time especially we eagerly desire the thoughtful and earnest prayer of every "White Ribboner" for the success of our society and our cause of temperance and moral up-lift, both locally and provincially.

Yours in His Service,
S. F. DAUM,
Pres. W. C. T. U.

Advice about Stomach Troubles
and how to relieve them.

Don't neglect this matter, for it may lead to all sorts of life and complications. An expert physician once said that ninety per cent of all life have their origin in a dis-ordered stomach.

Our experience with Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy leads us to believe them to be one of the most dependable remedies known for indigestion and chronic dyspepsia. Their ingredients are nothing to the injured sensitiveness of the stomach. Rich in Pepsin and Bismuth, two of the greatest digestive aids known to medicine, they help the stomach to perform its duty. They are gentle and refreshing. Used judiciously and regularly for a short time, they tend to relieve pain caused by stomach troubles.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy help digestion, and promote nutrition. An evidence of our faith in them, we ask you to try them at once. If they do not give entire satisfaction, we will return the money. The fact is that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is the only medicine that can be used with safety in all cases of stomach trouble.

How to Live Long and Keep Well

PAPER READ BEFORE WOMEN'S INSTI-TUTE MEETING BY MRS. W. H. STARK

This is an interesting topic to all of us, for there is no one I suppose, who does not wish to live long, and all of us value health above all other things in life.

One of the first ideas I might mention is that of Optimism. Look always on the brightest side of life and try to be optimistic in spirit. There are a great many people today who are pessimistic who do not really realize it. They are always complaining regarding something, and nothing seems to go right to suit them. It is the weather, their work, or perhaps their neighbors. In regard to the last let us all remember the old quotation:

"There is so much bad in the best of us,

And so much good in the worst of us,
That it hardly behoves any of us,
To speak ill of the rest of us."

In trying to keep well great care must be taken of ourselves. Some women who have to work all day, never think of lying down for 15 minutes rest. Few people realize the good such a rest would do them during the day.

Another thing to be mentioned is the intemperance in eating. A great many people today follow the maxim,
"Live to Eat," rather than "Eat to Live." By over-eating you may entirely ruin your health,—that asset which riches cannot buy.

I would add as another thought, that of recreation and pleasure. Nowadays we are so busy we think we have no time for recreation, but if you value your health as you should you must have some recreation. There are a great many innocent amusements and pleasures to indulge in, and you are able to forget for a few minutes the worries and cares of life. You all remember the old saying: "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

As the next thought on this subject,
I would say, always try to lend a helping hand to others and not simply say, it is none of my business. In trying to make life pleasant for others, you will get more pleasure out of it yourself. We can never be happy when we think only of self.

"Resolve to see the world on the sunny side, and you have almost won the battle of life at the outset."

As an after thought "Always be true to yourself."

Buy it now. Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is almost certain to be needed before the summer is over. Buy it now and be prepared for such an emergency. For sale by all dealers.

HIS MOTIVES THE PUREST.

He Continued Misunderstanding of the Public Griefs Him Greatly. His Experience While Exhibiting at Jump Off the Reverse of Felicitous.

By M. QUAD.

(Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.)

I AM making 50 per cent profit on my various remedies for the cure of what ails mankind, but there are times when I grow weary.

I can draw a man back from the yawning grave, but when my remedies won't grow a new leg to replace the wooden one I am called a fraud.

I can save the child dying of fever, but because I can't substitute something for his red hair mothers drive me from the door as a faker.

I take a tintype of man or woman at half price and in nine cases out of ten am blamed that it looks homely and natural. I save man or woman from a suicide's grave when laboring under despondency, and hope returns to them only to blame me for butting in.

I smile as I count my profits, but I shed tears when I think of the injustice of this world.

Besides lifting up the lowly, encouraging the sorrowing, selling my remedies, taking tintypes and showing my moving pictures as I travel about the country. I also collect statistics for the agricultural bureau at Washington and keep tab on human nature as I find it in various localities.

It grieves me to say that in carrying out this latter duty I have been forced to the conclusion that human nature is gradually but surely losing its reverence for sacred things. Not a week goes past but what I find a dozen instances of it, and it hurts me more than I can tell.

The Town of Jump Off.

Two years ago I exhibited my moving pictures at the town of Jump Off, which was founded as a future rival of Chicago and had seven murders and nine elopements the first year. When I showed the picture of General Washington at Valley Forge—emaciated, starved, discouraged and almost ready to trade American independence for a pumpkin pie—there was a breathless silence in the audience for a minute, and then sobs and tears broke forth from every point of the hall. Men who had not shed a tear when their mothers-in-law died now broke down and had to be led from the hall and in some cases, as I afterward learned, did not take a hand at poker for the next two weeks. I was told of women that went home and wept for three days and could not be comforted and of little children that wanted to send their food to the starving patriots.

Last week I got around to show my pictures in the same town again. There was a still larger audience, and I thought I observed an increased look of reverence on their faces. After collecting my statistics as to the number of cucumbers per acre raised in that part of Kansas this year I mounted the platform and started the show with the same old pictures. It was Washington sitting in his log house at Valley Forge. He was the most sorrowful looking skeleton ever exhibited to the public outside of an anatomical museum. I expected great results, and I got 'em. Instead of tears and sobs, the picture, no sooner appeared on the canvas than irreverent voices called out:

"Fat him up!"
"Feed him pudding and milk!"
"Give him chop suey!"
"Hey, George, old boy, where's your fried oysters?"

My grief and astonishment can hardly be imagined. As I looked at the audience in a reproachful way the audience continued to hoot and guff, and I had to take the picture on. The audience even hooted me. I then exhibited a picture of Satan walking arm in arm with a Boston alderman that had sold his vote for $2,000, and there was applause lasting seven minutes.

I Had Great Hopes.

The next picture was Faith clinging to the cross. I had great hopes that this would bring the audience back into the straight and narrow path, but was doomed to disappointment. She was advised to go home and go to darning stockings, and when I would have expressed my surprise at such sacrilege some one threw a turnip and hit me on the jaw.

From thence on I exhibited only pictures showing that the wages of sin are from four to ten dollars a day, with board and washing and theater tickets thrown in, and the audience went wild with enthusiasm. I could not close my eyes to the fact that the drift of the times was toward wickedness and that the travelling agents of family Bibles must be living on onions and sleeping in fence corners.

Next day, while I was driving over the highway from Jump Off to Stop Here, I met a cavalcade. My innocent face, venerable whiskers and bearing inspired me respect. In most cases the cavalcade removes its hats and bows low before me. In this case as a sign of the degeneracy of the times the cavalcade halted, and the leader asked me what I would take for my whiskers. I had not yet recovered from my astonishment when another man dismounted and climbed up on the wheel of my wagon and actually gave a tug at my whiskers to see if they were false. Then they called me old man and old boy and old boss, and one of them tried to spit tobacco juice in my fighting dog's eyes. As I drove on it just did seem to me that the end of the world was at hand. In imagination I could see the destruction of Sodom and hear the yells of its perishing inhabitants.

A Spirit of Levity.

Having reached the town itself, I observed that a spirit of levity and gaiety pervaded the place; but, though it might be owing to the fact that there was a man in town from Denver trying to sell folding bathtubs and hair-brushes, I opened my show by introducing Pilgrim Joe's Alternative, which is a well known remedy for drawing folks back from the grave. I had scarcely announced that the price still remained 25 cents, notwithstanding the panic, when a crowd began to hoot. In selling this alternative I usually tell a little story. It is about a fond mother whose sunny haired little boy gets in the way of a brick house and is crushed to a pulp. The mother sits grieving over the remains and wailing out that there is no more happiness for her on this earth when an angel comes flying down with a bottle of my justly celebrated remedy in her hand. She pats the grieving mother on her head and then sprinkles some of the alternative over the remains of the child. In five minutes he is chasing grasshoppers and the mother is laughing in glee and wondering when the next circus will come along.

Seeing that the crowd at Stop Here was a little out of humor, I started in to tell this story, but it brought missiles instead of tears and smiles. A majority of those missiles collided with my sacred body, and for the only time in thirteen years I was somewhat embarrassed. I passed the picture along and substituted "The Discovery of America." No good. They threw tobacco cuds at Christopher as he stood and gazed upon America. I substituted "Two Orphans," but the ragged and starving little girls, wandering around in a snowstorm at night in search of fodder and sympathy, were advised to cut it out. In desperation I changed to the most sacred picture in the collection, which represents a field of battle at night, after the fighting. There are dead and wounded scattered about, and instead of being on their roofs and asleep thousands of buzzards are hovering over the scene. There are angels there weeping over the dead or praying with the wounded and other angels with clubs whacking away at the buzzards.

Produced Tears and Sobs.

When I exhibited this picture in the towns of Step High, Go On, Merry L, and Who Cares there were such tears and sobs as produced a wave of influenza all through the state, and hundreds of men rode from ten to fifty miles to tell me that they would not enlist in the army if Japan licked us ten times over.

On this occasion, however, the picture was received in frozen silence. This lasted about a minute, and then the audience began to guff. The sacred angels were advised to try this or that breakfast food and to put on tailor made gowns and wear "Merry Widow" hats, and when I stepped to the front and protested against such sacrilege there were shouts for me to pull down my vest and get off the earth.

I have no desire to pose as a discoverer or explorer or to make my fellow man out worse than he is, but my convictions are:

First.—Sacred things are gradually losing their sacredness.

Second.—A spirit of levity is abroad

in the land.

Third.—This world will eventually be a mighty tough place to live in.

Fourth.—If you have a pain anywhere in the family or among your distant relatives take Pilgrim Joe's Annihilator.

Fifth.—If you haven't got a pain, but are slowly dying from grief, old age or disappointment, take Pilgrim Joe's Alternative. It will bring back to youth and oyster stews and give you a chance to start even with the world. There is no other. If your family druggist tries to get you to take a bottle of hair dye in its place call him a horse thief and walk out.

The Word.

"He pleaded with her to say the little word that would make him happy for life."

"Tell me quick! Did she say it?"
"She did. It was 'No'."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Wayside Chat.

"What did they give you at that last house?"
"Gimme three minutes before turnin' loose de dog."—Kansas City Journal.

Song of the Telegraph Wires.

A new theory of the singing of telegraph wires has been offered by Professor Field of the University of Ottawa. No explanation yet given seems to have been perfectly satisfactory, and the suggestion is now made that the sounds represent minute earth vibrations, which are transmitted to the wires through the poles. These vibrations depend largely on varying air pressure. The song of the wires, therefore, may give good barometric signals, a sharp sound indicating that a change is close at hand, while a low humming shows that present conditions may continue a day or perhaps two.

Knew What to Do.

A trolley car had butted into a pedestrian, who was knocked prone. Others who were passing, thinking the accident might be serious, rushed to the assistance of the fallen man.

"Are you much hurt?" asked a well intentioned individual who helped the victim to his feet. "Shall I get a doctor for you?"

"Doctor nothing!" replied the other. "Guess you don't know much about trolley accidents. Get me a lawyer."—Exchange.

To Keep Him Attentive.

"Why do you encourage your husband to drink so much coffee?"
"It's the one thing that will keep him awake nights, and that's the only chance I get to tell him what I really think of him."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Naturally.

"In a race between an airship and an automobile which would win?"
"Barring accidents, the airship ought to come out on top."—Chicago News.

One of Them.

"What are your views on the great public problems?"
"I haven't any views on public problems," replied the man whose interests are under investigation. "I'm one of them myself."—Washington Star.

All Depends.

Wigg—Is it unlucky to postpone a wedding day?
Wagg—Not if you keep on doing it.—Town Topics.

A new kink in addressing envelopes has been noticed recently by some of the postoffice clerks. Instead of the word "personal" on these envelopes to indicate that the letter is intended only for the eye of the person addressed has been written "himself." In each case these letters had been sent from England. In some parts of Ireland the head of the household is always referred to by the members of the family as "himself," and the influence of that custom may have had its effect on the English writers, or possibly the writers were Irishmen living in England.

Cost Big Sum.

The Swaffham Board of Guardians have received notice of the death of a female lunatic belonging to their Union who has been an inmate of the Norfolk Asylum since 1879. During her 44 years residence in that institution her maintenance cost the ratepayers $8,500.

LARGE FAMILIES.

Some English Households Are Nearly Record-Breakers.

Recently two extraordinary cases of very numerous offspring in the same family were recorded in the English press, and these attracted great attention at the time. One was that of Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, of Chiswick, who can boast a family of no fewer than twenty-nine "little" ones, though these are by two mothers, the present Mrs. Rogers being the second wife of Mr. Charles of that ilk, who is a well-known builder in the district. The proud father, aged seventy-four, might have been seen carrying his latest infant to his baptism a week or two ago, and Chiswick supporters did due honor to the occasion.

The other case was that of Mr. T. A. Slack, of Purley, Surrey, who, curiously enough as a coincidence, can also claim to be the father of twenty-nine children; and in this instance the writer believes, too, that Mr. Slack can boast that these "thirty save one" are still all alive.

Capital as these examples are, as showing that even in this age of bishops and judges who rail at the decaying birth-rate, yet the nation is not wholly going to the dogs in this matter, the instances mentioned do not form anything like a "record" for the country in this fashion.

There was that stalwart Scot hailing from Cromarty, Mr. Thos. Urquhart, who was not only the father of thirty-six children, but had the supreme satisfaction of living to see a large number of them gain very high positions and become quite eminent. Of the thirty-six no fewer than twenty-five were sons—quite an unusual proportion of the kind.

Sunderland just now seems to be trying to either break the record in another way, or to qualify in decent time for a place amongst the notables already mentioned. For the wife of a small shop-keeper in the Wearside town last month presented her spouse with twins, which would have satisfied most fond parents as the product of one twelve months. However, when it is learned that this same good lady had already borne another set of twins less than a year previously one may be forgiven for saying that, at the rate of "four a year" to such a youthful couple, the claims of Mr. Rogers, Mr. Slack, or even Mr. Urquhart, appear in much danger of being soon exceeded.

In the annals of "Numerous Children," by Boyle, there is a case given of a Paris lawyer who had no fewer than forty-five; and history also states that a baker in France could boast of twenty-one children, born at seven births, and all within the astonishing short space of seven years. What a family this would have been for winning the good graces of the prelate of London, or the former Bishop of Ripon!

Of course, the actual "record," so far as authentic history can give it at all, surely belongs to Signora Granta, the wife of an Italian living at Barcelona. This real "mother in Israel" did her duty so nobly to the state that, at the age of sixty, she could look round and count something like forty-nine olive branches who were as delighted as possible to call her "mother." Signora Granta undoubtedly holds the record still; and our English parents of twenty-nine—nay, even the Scottish ones of thirty-six—will have a long way to go to overtake it.—London Tit-Bits.

A Neglected M.P.

Shrewsbury, Eng., was at one period represented by a member singularly neglectful of his Parliamentary duties. John Mytton, who was returned for the borough in 1819, remained in the House only half an hour after he had taken the oath, and then left, never to set foot in St. Stephen's again. This solitary visit to the House cost him $50,000 in election expenses.

Mytton resigned his seat the following year, but stood for Shropshire twelve years later, when he had run through all his money. In his election address he stated: "I have now no wife, no family, no bounds, no horses—some will say no steadiness of purpose—but feeling that I can devote myself to your service I offer myself as a candidate." This time he was badly beaten at the poll.—Daily Chronicle.

Town Under the Waves.

Hon. Frederick G. Wynn, of Glynllifon, has succeeded in making an examination from his yacht of the site of Caer Arianrod, the Roman town which lies buried beneath the waves of Carnarvon Bay. About 40 yards from the crest of the reef, which covers two acres, and which tradition marks as the site of the old Roman station overwhelmed by the sea, he discovered large boulders arranged in regular lines which looked like the foundations of a building 20 yards in length by 10 yards in breadth, and a very curious and perfect pillar of stone, with a conical top, eight feet in height, three feet across, and three-sided in form.

Explanation Demanded.

"Have you heard about poor young Hicks' trouble with his wife?"

"No. I've been out of town for the last month. What is it?"

"He sent his office boy up to the house for his raincoat one day last week, and also found a memorandum in the pocket reading, 'Ribbon for typewriter,' and Hicks is having a dance of a time trying to explain."

BISHOP AS "HEALER"

BISHOP OF LONDON RECENTLY MADE A REMARKABLE CURE.

His Lordship Was Summoned to the Bedside of a Girl of Fifteen Suffering From Nervous Breakdown—Prayed For Her and Anointed Her Head With Oil After Which She Dropped Off Into a Sound Sleep.

His Lordship the Bishop of London recently effected a marvelous cure in the case of a fifteen-year-old girl suffering from a nervous breakdown. When his lordship reached the sick chamber in response to the mother's request, he found that the little one had been raving and shrieking in delirium all the afternoon, and it seemed unlikely that he would be able to pray for her without frightening her.

BISHOP OF LONDON.

As he stepped to the bedside, however, an extraordinary thing happened. "Do you know me, dear?" he said. "Yes," said the child, as she slipped her hand into that of the bishop. What followed is thus described by his lordship: "She had not slept for a long time. With the mother and the nurse I knelt at the bed. We had two prayers; then I anointed her on the forehead with oil, prayed for a blessing on it, placed my hand upon her head, and gave her the blessing, and at that moment she sank back into a deep sleep and slept for hours during the night, and, thank God, it is his good pleasure, she is now on the high way to recovery. I knew that evening that Jesus was personally with us, and I could not help thinking it was very much like the raising of Jairus' daughter over again."

A Labouchere Anecdote.

A Labouchere anecdote which has not been done to death is given in the new volume of recollections by Sir Henry Lucy ("Toby, M.P."), to whom it was told by Labby himself. It concerned the younger son of a peer, who thought that a berth in the Diplomatic Service was as desirable a place as any for one who took life rather easily. He knew nothing of the special subjects upon which the preliminary examination was based, but there was at least the promise of a lark. As far as he could make out, he did not supply a single correct answer to the long list of questions. Nevertheless, he came out first in the competition. It was a surprise even for a confident young lordling. Meeting one of the examiners at a dinner a few days later, he ventured to ask how the thing came about. "We at once saw you knew nothing," was the reply. "But your manner was so free from constraint under what to some people would have been peculiarly embarrassing circumstances that we said to each other, 'That's the very man to make a diplomatist.' So we gave you a start on your career."

Auction by Candle.

A quaint custom, over 200 years old, known as the "Candle Auction" for the letting of a field called Stowell Meadow, situated at Tatworth, near Chard, Somerset, Eng., was again observed. The tenants on the estate, of which Stowell Meadow forms part, met at the village inn, and during the burning of an inch of tallow candle made bids for renting ground for a year. Certain fines are imposed which are put into a "kitty," and afterwards spent upon refreshments for the company.

Burns Got Out of It.

Occasionally Mr. John Burns's great fluency lets him down. It did in the British House of Commons recently, when he was talking with pathos about "poor orphans and their widowed mothers who turn charwomen." "There they are," he cried, "working, cleaning out our public offices, making a noble struggle to keep a sick husband"—a little that grew rapidly to a roar of laughter informed him that he had gone wrong—"to keep a home together," he corrected, hastily.

Leprosy.

Mr. George Turner is reported to have said that, though leprosy is usually spread by contagion, most lepers are not nearly so dangerous to the public as a person suffering from consumption.

HOW THE CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY CARES FOR THE PUBLIC & FOR THE MEN WHO WAIT ON THE PUBLIC.

DEMONSTRATION FARM STRATHMORE

COMMISSARY BUILDING

A citizen of the world wishing to spend a holiday at Banff, in the heart of the Canadian Rockies or to make a business journey along the lines of the Canadian Pacific Railway rents his sleeping car berth, boards the train, lives and eats in luxurious surroundings while being whirled across the continent, and has little idea of the vastness of the enterprise upon which he bestows his patronage, nor of the tremendous system which must be maintained in order that he and others, likewise minded, may travel in such safety, comfort and luxury.

For instance he goes to bed and does not know that an army of men four thousand strong is employed by that Dining and Sleeping Car Department. He is not aware that the same company could, within five days, transport an army of thirty thousand people from Vancouver to Halifax, giving each a sleeping berth and supplying ninety thousand meals a day, or practically half a million on the five day journey across the continent. Again, he does not realize that, if the dining and sleeping cars of the Canadian Pacific Railway were made up into a single train with a locomotive stationed at intervals ten coaches apart, that that train would be fourteen miles long. To man this city on wheels would require an army of three thousand dining and sleeping car attendants with several hundred additional men at terminals to handle supplies for them. This is exclusive of the thousand men who would be operating the train in the capacity of brakemen, conductors, firemen and engineers, a total aboard in all of 24,000 people.

TAKING CARE OF THE PUBLIC.

It would take a great deal of space to tell how the Canadian Pacific Railway takes care of the public which patronizes its lines and how also it takes care of those employees whose duty it is to minister to the comfort of that public. Yet the C.P.R. has taken many steps in that direction and it is safe to say that in a dozen particulars it stands ahead of any road on the continent when it comes to treating its dining and sleeping car employees humanely and sanely. These men are as deserving a class of public servant as can be found in any private house from the point of view of efficiency, personal cleanliness and freedom from danger of spreading disease. The company is as considerate of its men as it is of the general public and it is fully aware that such a course is simple "good business."

Certainly the most colossal task that presents itself to the C.P.R. is that of provisioning its dining cars to feed the hungry multitudes who cross their thresholds each meal hour. It is estimated that in the summer season the C.P.R. serves on an average twenty thousand meals a day on its cars. For many years the company has been grappling with the problem of supplying this enormous demand in a way that would insure to the general public absolutely clean and perfectly wholesome meals and only now has the company come to believe that it has the situation completely in hand.

The first problem that presented itself was to have secure a really assured and permanent source of supply. To attain this and, incidentally, to show farmers in various districts the possibilities of their lands when scientifically worked, demonstration farms were started throughout the Dominion. These supply absolutely fresh provisions to the chain of commissary stores stretching across the continent and give the Canadian Pacific Railway the assurance of a permanent supply at cost prices. In this an absolutely radical departure was made in that the C.P.R. actually owns and operates the farms which supply it with provisions.

The advantage of this is not far to seek. Fresh milk and cream will soon be secured in whatever quantities are desired. A sufficiently large number of poultry can be kept to supply all requirements for table fowl and eggs. To insure freshness in the eggs used on dining cars the product is gathered from the nest (all eggs are non-fertile by the way) stamped with the date, and then packed in cartons and sealed for delivery to commissary stores. Milk and cream are not handled in bulk. After being thoroughly pasteurized the product is placed in sealed bottles and these are opened in the presence of the passenger with the day and date of milking right on the bottle. Similar care is taken to insure absolute cleanliness in all other demonstration farm products.

ONE OF THE HOMES FOR THE MEN

SECTION OF BAKEHOUSE

INTERIOR OF DINING CAR.

Fruits and vegetables form a large item on dining car menu. The Canadian Pacific Railway imports these from all parts of the world and offers them on its tables before they are available elsewhere, and then, when the Canadian products are ready the preference is given them. In fact the company specializes in the famous fruits and vegetables of British Columbia and contracts for these products for the entire requirements, especially apples and potatoes, for this service for all western lines one year in advance. The quality of these fruits, such as apples, plums, cherries, pears, and vegetables such as celery and potatoes now stands highest in the continent.

AN OBSTINATE PROBLEM

One really obstinate problem has confronted

DORMITORY FOR DINING CAR MEN

the Canadian Pacific and that has been the supplying of fresh bread and pastry to its patrons—bread and pastry of such a quality that the shield and beaver trademark would be its guarantee. Many experiments have been tried but that degree of success desired by the company is only now being attained. Final upon all plans comes the announcement on this year's appropriation list to the effect that the company will install a chain of modern bakeries at such terminal points between Halifax and Vancouver as would insure a complete re-stocking of dining cars with fresh bread, cakes and pastry every fifteen hours. Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Moose Jaw, Calgary and Vancouver are to have such railroad bakeries as will insure other points not yet definitely decided upon.

The care of meats, milks, vegetables and perishable goods for the twenty thousand people who must be fed daily by this one railway requires most elaborate refrigeration plants. All refrigeration is done artificially and the scientifically perfect degree of coldness is maintained to preserve the goods and so to maintain highest quality.

A MODERN SCIENCE.

Modern medical science, both preventive and curative, has reduced itself to practically one only science—bacteriology—with the allied art of preventing disease bugs from finding a moment in any place that comes in contact with human beings, more particularly to keep all human food free from exposure to these germs. Recognizing this, the Canadian Pacific Railway has worked out an elaborate system of individual service, reducing the handling of food to a minimum. All bread, cakes, pastry, pie, puddings, etc., are prepared in individual order; in fact this system is extended to cover all possible service; even ice cream, which is made under most sanitary conditions, is prepared in individual portions, each portion wrapped in special case to prevent handling.

ITS FIRST CARE.

One of the first cares of the Canadian Pacific Railway is to see that all its employees are physically healthy and clean and to this end it has been deemed expedient to establish a chain of homes for the dining and sleeping car men over the entire continent. The C.P.R. is the only railroad corporation today which provides this class of employees with free lodgment and food when away from home. At all large terminals such as Toronto, Winnipeg, Moose Jaw, Calgary and Vancouver these dining car and sleeping car employees are housed by the company. In establishing this system the management had one main idea in view. It would be able to give the general public the assurance that every employee had a physique free from disease, because all are subjected to a periodic medical examination, and it would itself then be in a position to assume responsibility for the cleanliness of employees. Under the system that prevails on the C.P.R. it is impossible for a dining or sleeping car employee to go out on a run, as it is called, without first having taken a bath and gotten his clothes newly cleaned and pressed free of any cost to the employee.

Nor is the Canadian Pacific Railway inspired by solely business motives in this work. The company is not a "soulless corporation" in dealing with its men. On the contrary, the homes, as the illustrations will show, are an embodiment of the cozy home spirit. Comfortable nooks and corners abound. All are scientifically ventilated and managed by competent caretakers. Libraries, bathrooms, including showers, large windows and indeed all the details of the modern home are present, and everything is spotlessly clean. Thus, when a C.P.R. man is away from home he is under the company's care. And so it comes about that C.P.R. employees would pass medical inspection to report for duty in any hospital, if occasion for their service arose. The result of all this care shown in the health of the employees by going out from the terminal rested, in good health and in every way prepared to care for the public.

Three big men weighing about a thousand pounds were victors at the Big Ben sale being conducted by J. V. Berscht which opened at nine o'clock Saturday morning. The prize was a dollar a head for the first six customers entering the doors at that time. The little runts had no show at all, the big fellows seemed glued to the door and chances for the small dollar looked poor to those who had to stand off from the big three, although it must have looked big to the big men--no doubt on account of the reputed financial stringency. The winners were P. Reed, D. S. Shantz, E. Lindquist, Ross Shantz, Frank Colwell and Richardson.

Microbes in Your Scalp

Authorities say that a microbe causes baldness. If you are losing hair try our remedy at our risk.

Professor Unna, of Germany, and Dr. Sabouraud, the great French Dermatologist, claim that a microbe causes baldness, and their theory has been verified by eminent scientists. This microbe destroys the hair follicles in time causing the scalp pores to close and the scalp to become shiny. Then, it is believed nothing will revive the growth. If treated before this occurs, baldness may be overcome.

We know of nothing that has given such universal satisfaction in treating the scalp and hair as Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. It has been designed after long study to overcome the cause of falling hair as discovered by Prof. Unna, Dr. Sabouraud and other scalp and hair specialists, and we believe it will do more than anything else can to remove dandruff and stop falling hair; and if any human agency can promote a new growth of hair it will do that, too.

We want you to make us prove it. We will pay for a month's treatment of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic used during a trial, if you will use it according to directions, and are not thoroughly satisfied. When we will do this, you surely should not hesitate to at least try it.

Start the treatment today. Your mere request will get your money back if you want it. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00.
